The Hon. William Mutchler of eastern Pennvivania writes that the nominations have aroused great enthusiasm in his section of the State. A number of Hancock and English clubs have sprung into being, and many Hancock eteran associations have been organized, with a number of Republican soldiers on their rolls. Charles Smith, President of a Hancock club in Belie Forte. Pa., writes: "We expect to poll the largest Democratic vote ever cast in Centre County, and increase our majority at least 25 per cent. over that of 1876."

A letter from John Markley, Sheriff of Martin County, California, reads: "I am pleased to say that many of the Republican workingmen are with us this year. This county gave Hares a majority in 1876, but we are going to carry it for Hancock this time."

W. A. Selkirk, Secretary of the Democratic State Committee of California, writes: "The nomination of Hancock and English has excited the greatest enthusiasm in California."

The news from other States is equally good. A. C. Parkinson, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee of Wisconsin, writes: "The feeling in Wisconsin is excellent. In fact, I have never known a Presidential campaign to open so suspiciously."

HOMICIDE IN BROOKLYN.

Man Fatally Gashed with a Raser. Edward Hogan, a laborer, 37 years of age. living at 41 Columbia street, quarreled with his wife in their apartments, in the third story of the building last night, and attempted to cut her with a razor. Mrs. Burns, a sister of Mrs. Hogan, rushed between the man and wife and received a cut on the right arm, just below the elbow, which almost severed the limb from her body. Hogan, with the weapon still in his hand, ran down the stairs and into the street. At the door he was accessed by a number of young men, who reproached him for his cowardice in attacking a woman. Hogan turned on one of them, a young 'long-shoreman named Thompson, and cut him clean down from the left shoulder to the lower part of the abdomen. The knije penetrated the left lung and intestines. Thompson was taken to the Long Island College Hospital in a dying condition. Mrs. Burns was also taken to the hospital, where she subsequently identified Hogan, who was arrested in his bedroom.

Hogan had been drinking freely. In the station he said he was assaided by Thompson and a number of others, and that he used the knife in self-defence. Landlerd Post's Description of the Sunday Ruttle at the Idle Hour-A New Jersey Magistrate's Comment on the Occurrence.

The twenty-one members of the James F. Fitzgerald Association of this city who were arrested on Sunday afternoon in Greenville and Jersey City, for having created a riot at the Idle Hour Hotel, in the former place, were ar-raigned before Justice Peloubet, in the First District Police Court, at Jersey City, yesterday morning, on the charge of being disorderly persons. The prisoners were arraigned in a semi-circular line about the magistrate's desk. They wore the uniform of the club, which consists of a blue flannel shirt, a broad-brimmed hat of rough straw, and trousers which are remarkable for the closeness of their fit. A throng of friends from this city were present, prepaired to furnish bail in case any of them were held for the action of the Grand Jury. A numerous delegation of farmers from Greenville, whose lands had been overrun by the marauders, were also in attendance.

Mr. Henry C. Post, the proprietor of the Idle

Hour, was the first witness examined. He is a tall, powerful man. His right hand was bandaged, owing to a severe cut that had been inflicted by one of the rioters, while a scar on his forehead marked where he had been struck by Morrissey, the Captain, and Tim Bullivan, the Treasurer of the association, who were among the defendants, had visited him about a week ago, and had made arrangements with him for the entertainment of their club. When Post endeavored to ascertain from them the character of the organization, he was informed that it was composed of what Mr. Morrrissey termed crockery at the landford. He dodged the flying missiles as well as he could, but several of them struck him. Before he could recover the mob charged headlong upon him. He defended himself vigorously until his son and Capt. Shrope and Sergeant Lyons came to his aid. They succeeded in forcing a passage through the crowd and retired to the stable shed.

The object of that move on the part of the police was to capture the gaudily painted stage in which the party had come, so as to prevent their retreat. Shrope, with his revolver in his hand, led the way. Policemen Murphy and McCoy, who had arrived in response to an alarm that had been sent out, attempted to arrest the ringleader of the excursionists. They grasped him and were leading him away when his companions rallied to his rescue, and took him out of their custody. The police a few minutes later again seized him, but his fellows again overpowered the policemen, and carried away the prisoner.

nim out of their custody. The police a few minutes later again asized him, but his fellows again overpowered the policemen, and carried away the prisoner.

Mr. Norman L. Rowe, a well-known lawyer of Jersey City, who happened to be spending the day at the ldie Hour with a yachting party, testified that when the disturbance began he ran up to the hotel balcony, and looked through the window of the dining room. The scene which he saw enacting in the apartment defled description. The air was thick with flying chairs knives, forks, bottles, glasses, and dishes. The rioters were struggling desperately with Mr. Post, and had it not been for the timely arrival of the police would have seriously injured him. When Policeman Murchy was placed upon the witness stand he produced a long, black handled fork, which, he said, he had found sticking in the side of his leg after the battle in the dining-room.

The defence was maintained by Lawyer William D. Daly. He had been retained by all the prisoners. Each of the accused men was sworn in turn, and gave his version of the alfair. Their testimony was calculated to inspire doubts as to the existence of any such place as the Idle Hour, and made it seem clear that none of them had been guilty of any disorderly or objectionable conduct. They insisted that Poat began the row by knocking down one of their most inoffensive members. At the conclusion of the evidence counsel summed upthe case, and Judge Peloubet proceeded to pronounce indement. This riot, he said, was the most outrageous violations of law and decency that has taken place in the county in years past. An idwa has got abroad that Jersey City and lissuburbs offer desirable opportunities for beer revels and Sunday disturbances. That is a mistake, "The Court then said that nine of the defendents who had endeavored to assist in quelling the disturbance, or who were not presentate," are found guilty of disorderly conduct, and are sentenced to pay a fine of $20 cach or to serve sinety days in the penitentiary."

man's sea lions, that escaped from their pen at Brighton Beach on Friday night, found himself actually free it is evident that he struck ou poldly into the sea, and, heading southwest swam straight away from the island. He was big. powerful fellow, easily the chief of the herd of eight; and it is also quite evident that he outstripped his companions, who scattered in various directions. The evidence of this is that on Saturday afternoon the canal men on the Delaware and Raritan Canal at New Brunswick saw a big beast swimming up the canal from the Raritan River. It was Big Bill. He had crossed from Coney Island to Raritan Bay, crossed the bay, and made his way up the river to New Bruns-wick. Here is the terminus of the Delaware and Raritan Canal, and into the canal Bill turned. The boatmen saw him, and so did Harbor Master R. W. Welch. They ran to the edge of the water. Bill kept on his way, and soon entered a lock, the lower gates of which were open, Here was a chance to capture the big fellow, of which the men availed themselves. The lower gates were swung to, and old Bill was in a tighter cages than he had known since he was dumped off the turs at the end of the Brighton Pier.

Harbor Master Welch telegraphed to Mr. Engeman on Sunday that he had captured one of his escaped sea ilons, for which he had offered a reward of $50, each. It was hardly believed at first on the island that it could be one of the ilons which had been captured in this New Jersey town, thirty miles from Brighton Beach, But yesterday morning one of the jockeys, a steepleshase rider, employed at the Brighton Beach. But yesterday morning one of the jockeys, a steepleshase rider, employed at the Brighton Beach race track, returned from New Brunswick, where he had passed Sunday, and said that it was true that Bill had been captured. He also reported that the captors had shot him, and that he was likely to dis. Thereupon Mr. Engeman sent "Bub" Steve Voorhis and a man named Platt to New Brunswick, with orders to bring the lion home. The men returned in the atternoon after an unsuccessful trip. They reported that the lion was then in Brunswick certainly, but the men who caught him had jabbed him with boat hooks and shot him, and otherwise maitreated him until it was very likely that he would die. Why they did this was not known. The anyons from Brighton tried to negotiate for Bill. The New Brunswickers wanted $100 reward for capturing him. This the envoys would not pay, particularly since the captive was so badly damaged. They offered $40, and there the matter rested and the envoys returned empty handed. "I don't know what we shall do about it now "said Mr. Batersby, Mr. Engeman's partner, last evening at the Batbing Pavilion restaurant." If Bill is so badly hurt that he will die, we don't want him at all. The will li The boatmen saw him, and so did Harbor Master R. W. Weich. They ran to the edge of the water. the counsel. Mr. Chapin desires to bring all the suits in Brooklyn, and on each of the three notices is written: "Trial is desired in Kings County."

Mr. Chapin has a large number of affidavits, it is said, made by guests of the hotel and others, as to the condition of the beach on certain dates. It will be shown also, it is said, that many guests, after having put on bathing drosses and having gone down to the edge of the water, refused to go into the surf because the water was made repulsive to them by the presence of garbage. Beyond this there is said to be testimony to show that large fallings off in the receipts of the plaintiffs have been caused on certain days by the presence of garbage. These suits will be brought for past damazes and for protection in the future, but the officers of the companies asy that the nuisance complained of does not now exist, because they have made arrangements by which a representative of the companies goes on every tug which tows seews down the bay.

"If I only knew how much they wanted," said Capt. Williams sarcastically, when he was served with the notices yesterday at the Police Central Office. I would go down and settle with them now."

By the advice of Police Commissioner Nichols. Capt. Williams consulted the Corporation Counsel. Commissioner Nichols finds much fault with Shore Inspector Hopkins because the latter inserts in his permit to dump carbage in the bowners of the tug to dump only between the hours of 11:15 A. George Brunner, One of the Crew of the Clara s., Falls Dead at his Post.

The Hudson River Yacht Club had their sixth annual sailing match yesterday. Eighteen yachts, divided into four classes, started. The course was from off the club house at Seventieth street, North River, to Fort Lee, to Weekhawen Dock, to starting point, sailed over twice. The pretty fleet slipped off with a favoring tide and there was every prospect of a brilliant race, when a mournful event happened on one of the yachts which cast a gloom over the day's sport. The Clara S. had sailed over about half the distance between starting point and the Fort Lee stakeboat, when George Brunner, one of the crew, who was tending jib sheets, suddenly feil backward and almost immediately died. His death was caused by heart disease. The crew of the Clara S. hauled out of the race, and, with colors at half mast, returned to the club house. Several of the rachts writhdrew, while others, unaware of the calamity, continued in the race. The yachts Lydia, Irene, Idie Hour, and Laurel were the winners in their respective classes. Mr. Brunner had been a member of the club for several years, and was much esteemed by the members. there was every prospect of a brilliant race.

THE SHOOTING AT SAG HARBOR. A Misunderstanding and a Small Quarrel Cost

Wilbur and Higgins, who were arrested or shooting Miles Morris at Sag Harbor on Saturday night, were strangers to the latter. Morris lived in the upper portion of a house owned by a Mrs. Kelly, on Spring street.
The lower portion of the house was occupied by Mrs. Kelly and a family named Stakeland. Morris was employed in a fish factory at Promised Land. He returned to his home on Saturday evening about 9% o'clock. As he was about to go in he saw Higgins sitting on the stoop, talking with the Stakeland girls. Morris mistook Higgins for Edward Kelly, the son of the owner of the property, and told him that he had better fix the walks before he came to see the girls. Higthe walks before he came to see the girls. Hig-gins, understanding the other's mistake, jok-ingly replied: "You had better pay the rent to my mother." This enraged Morris, who was a little intoxicated. One of the girls then told Morris that it was not Kelly, and that the young myn was only looling him, After some fur-ther talk the men clinched, but Higgins got away and ran up the street. Morris went into the house, where he remained a few mo-ments then ease out and went up the street.

away and ran up the street. Morris went into the house, where he remained a few moments; then came out and went up the street. Higgins, after the lapse of nearly an hour, returned and wished to go up stairs to the rooms occupied by Morris, but the girls would not let him.

While the girls were talking to Higgins, Wilbur, a friend of the latter, came to the house, and the two men went away together. This was at 11:30 o'clock. A few moments after their departure the girls heard a pistol shot, and, going out, found Morris lying unconscious on the walk about forty feet from the house.

Mrs. Morris says that, hearing a noise on the street, she came out of the house justa moment before the shooting. She saw Higgins run, and her husband chase him. Wilbur at this time stood within twenty feet of the house, and was within ten feet of Morris. He raised a pistol and shot the latter. The ball entered Morris's head just below the left eye, penetrating the brain, and killing him instanily.

Higgins and Wilbur were respectively a deckhand and a fireman on the steamer Sunshine, plying between Hartford and Sag Harbor. Higgins lives in Hartford, and is 19 years of age. Wilbur, an older man, lives in Providence, Both were locked up directly after the shooting. A Coroner's jury yesterday gave a verdict to the effect that Wilbur killed Morris, and after the fact.

THE NEW AFGRAN RULER.

rrahman Khan Begianing his Reign der Pavorable Conditions.

LONDON, July 26 .- A despatch to the Times from Cabul says: "On Friday prayers were read in all the mosques in the name of the new Ameer, Abdurrahman Khan, with a fair degree of enthusiasm. At Jellalabad the news was re-ceived with satisfaction. The first meeting between the British political agent and the new Ameer will take place early this week, ten miles north of Sherpur. The British guard is withdrawn from the City Hall into the Bala Hissar. The pricet Mooshki Aliam is trying to reconcile the opposition chiefs to Abdurrahman. Much strengthening Abdurrahman's party.

"A general feeling of relief is manifest among the Afghans that a conclusive step is at last taken, and the new Ameer will begin his reign

"A general feeling of relief is manifest among the Afghans that a conclusive step is at lest taken, and the new Ameer will begin his reign with many conditions in his favor. He will scarcely allow sentimental gratitude to Russia for past favors to outweigh those future favors which he knows he may expect from the British if he behaves lovally; nor, if all native testimony is to be believed, will the Afghans themselves permit their future ruler to risk involving them in a second contest with the British by exhibiting Russian sympathies."

A despatch to the Times from Calcutta says it is expected the army will evacuate Cabul in August.

The London morning papers point out the fact as significant that, in proclaiming Abdurrahman Khan, the formula used was. Ameer of Cabul, not. Ameer of Afghanistan," indicating the intention of the Government to maintain the separation of Candahar.

The British forces in front of Candahar are apprehending an attack from Avoob Khan.

In the House of Commona, the Marquis of Hartington, Secretary for India, reciping to an inquiry, said the communications with Abdurrahman Khan were opened by Lord: Lytton and continued by the Marquis of Ripon, the present Viceroy of India; that no formal engagement has been entered into with Abdurrahman Khan were opened by Lord: Lytton and continued by the Marquis of Ripon, the present Viceroy of India; that no formal engagement has been entered into with Abdurrahman Khan, the has simply been recognized as Ameer of Cabul. No foreign Minister or foreign interference will be allowed at Cabul. Temporary assistance in promised the Ameer. He will not be asked to receive a British mission, but a Mohammedan envoy will be sent to Cabul on behalf of India, and it is hoped the troops will shortly be able to retire, handing over the city to the Ameer.

Lord Hartington also said that the uncertainty of Afghan politics was so great that it was impossible to feel that all our troubles there were not districts named in the freety of Gundamak. He was also informed that

GERMANS ON THE SEASHORE.

Fun-loving Germans opened yesterday the summernight's Mestival of the First Allgemeinen Doutschen Volksfest-Vereins of New York at West Brighton Besch Hotel, Coney Island. The festival is to be continued to-day and to-morrow. The building and the surrounding tence were decorated with flags, and in the evening Chinese lanterns and electric lights lluminated the scene. In the afternoon some professional acrobats and club swingers amused the children, and Zanfretta waiked on a tight rope stretched one hundred feet high. Toward evening a procession was formed, and Columbia, sitting on a charlot, was drawn around the platform several times. Columbia, a stout young woman in a scanty costume, was attended by four buxom young women in cool sittire, and all were protected by two Continental officers. The procession stopped in front of a shrouded figure at one end of the dancing platform. A string was pulled, and a slivered status of Germania was disclosed.

Of course the chief enjoyment was beer. Beer was everywhere. The capacity of a jolly Garman seemed to be unlimited. Glass followed glass, and the only effect was a more shiny man seemed to be unlimited. Glass followed glass, and the only effect was a more shiny forehead. Where a thin man found espacity for glassful afterglassful was equally assonishing. The band played, children danced, and beer gurgled until a rush was made toward the dancing pistform where Columbia appeared again amid loud clapping by the throng. The aerobats continued their antica, and late in the evening there were fableaux of "Aphrodite and Neptune" and "Verherrlichung der Germanist" on astage in one corner near the sands.

DID SHE LEAP OVERBOARD?

A CURIOUS STORY TOLD BY PASSES.

GERS ON THE KILL FON KULL.

Woman Dressed in White that Mr. L. M.

Southworth Says He Saw Jump Over the Rall-What the Mate of the Boat Says. The Kill von Kull steamed away from the Coney Island Iron pier at 9 o'clock last evening on her return to New York. Before she got to the point of the island there was a commotion on the forward saloon deck, on the port or ocean side of the boat. Talking was heard in that part of the boat, and soon afterward a parasol was reported as having been found for which no claimant. It was reported that a lady had jumped overboard. Somebody, it was reported had gone down to tell the engineer to stop the boat. The boat, however, did not stop. Inquiry was made among the passengers, and two were found who said they saw her go over. One of these said his name was I. M. Southworth, and that he lives near Elizabeth, N. J. Mr. Southworth said that while he was sitting on the port side of the saloon deek he saw a lady and gentleman, each under middle age and each geaterly dressed, sitting to his left, facing the ocean, with their feet reating on the edge of the seat which is attached to the guardrail. The couple were in that retired corner of the uncovered part of the deck which extends back beside the cabin. The lady did not seem to get along well with the gentleman, Mr. Southworth noticed the gentleman get up and walk away from the lady, further into the corner. boat. The boat, however, did not stop. "My God! your lady's overboard!"
"He said to me in reply: "My God! I'll jump after her."
Mr. Southworth said he did not see the gentleman jump overboard, and he presumes that he did not. It was pretty dark, and the wind at the time was blowing hard. The other man referred to as having seen the lady disappear, said he got the impression that she fell overboard, and did not jump. Inquiry was next made of the mate, who ridiculed the idea that any person had fallen overboard.

Thave just heard, said he, that she fell off the stern. Now she could not have fallen off in two places."

The mate denied that any person had gone to the engineer with a request to stop the boat because a lady had fallen overboard. It was reported among the passengers that the man who took the parasol to an officer of the boat had grasped it from the lady as she was going overboard. The matter formed the general subject of conversation on the passenger to New York, Just before the Kill von Kull made her first landing the mate reported that nobody had been lost overboard, because a man had come forward and claimed the parasol. The pilot gave it to him. On being asked the parasol had been learned the mate said it had not. The pilot did not know who he was, the mate said.

Walting until June Last Before Drawing his Share of the Salary Grab.

WASHINGTON, July 26 .- A reminiscence of the salary grab, which was engineered through Congress mainly by the efforts of James A. Garfield, has recently come to light. William Peter Sprague, an Onlo member of Congress who served in the Forty-second and Fortyof Congress who served in the Forty-second and Forty-third Course-set, voted against the salary grab, and at the time wrote a letter scorning to touch the unclean thing. Subsequently, his come tuents advised him to give $1.000 or the grab to each of the five most promi-nent serimitural secondes in the State. This he declined to do, because there was horse racing attached to such societies, and he did not care to encourage such wicked-ness. Tainking the matter forgation, Sprayue, on the 24th of June last, drew the money train the Freasury De-partment in five draits, and now has it in his possession.
